As a Scottish woman and expatriate, Mrs. Oliphant (1828-97) began her prolific writing career removed in many ways from the center of Victorian literary life. Widowed early, she became keenly aware of the discrepancy between society's assumptions about women's roles and her own position as a female breadwinner in the male-dominated world of nineteenth-century publishing.

Mrs Oliphant is half-disapproving, half-fascinated by Lucilla's self-absorption, but throws herself into Lucilla's story. Very little actually happens - but that's not the point. Against Lucilla's single-minded energy, dominating the little town of Carlingford, are set the slighter stories (some bitter, some humourous, all acutely observed) of her neighbours.
